

Contingency and Emergency Planning

Are you prepared for a potentially catastrophic event that appears unlikely to occur, but if it did, would have potentially disastrous effects for the business and the people that work within it?

Contingency and emergency planning arising from SHE concerns is a natural extension of good risk management it's just taking the identification of a hazard to the next stage.

elnet consulting can assist you in the identification of your key business risks (after all you know your business, your people and the particular risks to your operation) and can facilitate and advise on good practices we've seen with contingency and emergency planning.

We also have experience of the application of process safety in high risk environments. These principles can be applied in any business environment to ensure you understand all potential 'negative' outcomes and have identified all pro-active control measures that will prevent these outcomes occurring. These control measures can be likened to barriers or layers of protection and need to be multi-layered to maximise the overall effectiveness. Once the barriers have been identified, we can advise on their effectiveness and how they can be tested and confirmed on a frequent basis to maintain their integrity.
